Advanced Air Transport Management

Advanced Air Transport Management

Course Description

The course covers a wide area of expertise related to air transport management, while enabling you to specialize in a selection of subject areas. This flexibility means that you can tailor the course to your particular interests and aspirations.

The course aims to provide you with a thorough grounding in all key air transport management issues and debates, as well as develop your managerial, interpersonal, financial, project management, team-building, and analytical skills. To build the management and leadership skills required to contribute to a more sustainable industry future, you will be called upon to locate, carefully consider, and provide recommended solutions to a host of contemporary challenges.

Who Should Attend?

The Air Transport Management is suitable for students from a range of academic backgrounds, including aeronautical engineering, economics, business studies, history and geography, or those with demonstrable experience in the air transport industry. Students are typically keen to pursue employment within the air transport sector.
